The swift leadership change at Hindustan Unilever (HUL), announced on Thursday, came as a surprise to many, which is understandable as Rohit Jawa is only the second CEO in HUL's long history to have just a two-year stint at the helm. But if you dig a little deeper, the change was ___(A)___ for at least two reasons. First, the average CEO tenure in companies around the globe is becoming shorter, courtesy of the ___(B)___ changes and uncertainties in the external environment. Second, Unilever itself saw the abrupt exit of Hein Schumacher as the global CEO just 20 months into his tenure in February. He was replaced by Fernando Fernandez, who the board thought could ___(C)___ the company's growth plan "with urgency". It all came down to that one word, much beloved by Wall Street: urgency. So it can be a safe assumption that Priya Nair, a tried and tested hand at both HUL and Unilever, has been given the job to lend urgency to the business ___(D)___ plan that Fernandez, another Unilever veteran, has in mind. The overarching global theme of this plan is to move faster with a focus on demand creation and ___(E)___ execution.

But if you dig a little deeper, the change was _____(A)_____ for at least two reasons.

The G7 meeting in Canada last month made waves, mainly for the wrong reasons. US President Donald Trump did not just leave the meeting __(A)___ but also attacked Iran, pushing the world to the brink of another world war. The G7 was established 50 years ago, but things have not changed much since then. The start of the 1970s brought multiple economic crises in the world economy—the breakdown of Bretton Woods, oil shock, and the dual problems of high inflation and high unemployment. To __(B)___ the crises, in 1973, then US treasury secretary George Schultz held an informal meeting with the finance ministers of the UK, France, and Germany. Given the crisis in geopolitics and geoeconomics, the French presidency organised the first formal meeting of the G5, with Italy as the sixth member, at Château de Rambouillet. The G6 decided to convene annually under a rotating presidency, and added Canada as the seventh member to become G7. Over 50 years, the G7 evolved into a/ an __(D)___ platform for advanced economies to coordinate their economic policies. What brought together Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa (BRICS), along with six new members—Egypt, Ethiopia, Iran, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, and Indonesia—at the latest BRICS+ summit in Rio de Janeiro was their common desire to explore new ways of addressing their development challenges. At its annual leaders' summit held in Brazil on July 6 and 7, the group __(A)__ new partnerships in pursuit of multilateralism, trade, and development—rather than a world driven by military alliances or ideology. As a loose coalition that includes authoritarian (China, Russia) and democratic (Brazil, India, South Africa) states, BRICS is not unique: the United Nations (UN) and the Commonwealth also __(B)__ autocracies and democracies. BRICS is not synonymous with a new world order. That, unfortunately, has been __(C)__ by Russia's ongoing invasion of Ukraine, Israel's use of starvation as a tactic in its war against Gaza, and US President Donald Trump's __(D)__ foreign and economic policies, which have led him to treat the US's European allies as adversaries while threatening most countries with trade and tariff wars. Trump's attack on the nuclear facilities of Iran—one of the new members of BRICS—has also sent international shockwaves. So has what Brazil's President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva described as “the genocide carried out by Israel in Gaza.” However, while appearing to __(E)__ the Trump administration's tariffs and foreign policies, the BRICS final statement did not directly mention him or the US. In short, the ending of one international order—signified by the US's sudden retreat from multilateralism, international law, and global governance—is not necessarily making way for the sudden arrival of a brave new world led by a larger BRICS group.

The good news for agricultural operations during the kharif or summer season is that the southwest monsoon has rapidly advanced to cover the entire country nine days ahead of its normal schedule on July 8. The monsoon also had an early onset over Kerala eight days before its normal date of June 1. It subsequently stalled in the first half of June and _____(A)_____ in the second half with above-normal rainfall for the month as a whole, registering 109% of its long period average (LPA). _____(B)_____ rainfall in the first month of the monsoon season marked a welcome break from the earlier three years, which recorded an overall deficiency in June.
