- (B) Most of which had represented
- (C) Most of who has represented
- (D) Most of whom has represented
- (E) No improvement required

ANSWER*1.Ans: (C)

Explanation: The noun 'police' is a collective noun that takes a plural verb, so 'have' is correct instead of 'has'.

Also, 'goods' (meaning items or property) is always used in the plural form in this context. Hence, the correct phrase is: 'The police have found several stolen goods.'

2.Ans: (A)

Explanation: The subject 'traditions' is plural, so the verb should be 'have remained' instead of 'has remained'.

Also, 'in the remote villages' is correct to show location. Therefore, the correct phrase is: 'Some of the traditions in the remote villages have remained'.

3.Ans: (C)

Explanation: Since 'lighthouse' is a singular non-living object, we use the possessive pronoun 'its', not 'her', 'his', or 'their'.

Also, 'it's' is a contraction of 'it is', which is incorrect here.

So, the correct phrase is: 'beneath its waters'.

4.Ans: (E)

Explanation: The phrase 'having successfully implemented' is the correct perfect participle form, indicating a completed action before another.

'Successfully' is the correct adverb modifying the verb 'implemented'.

So, no improvement is required.

5.Ans: (D)

Explanation: The correct pronoun is 'whom', as it is the object of the preposition 'of'.

Also, 'several' is plural, so the verb must agree — 'had submitted' is appropriate in the past perfect tense.

'Which' is used for things, not people, so it is incorrect here.

Correct phrase: 'several of whom had submitted'.

6.Ans: (A)

Explanation: In a direct question, the auxiliary verb ('is') should come before the subject ('it'). So, 'How it is possible' is incorrect word order; it should be 'How is it possible'.

Also, the base verb 'construct' is correctly used after 'to', and 'ancient civilizations' is a general reference, so no article is needed.

Correct phrase: 'How is it possible for ancient civilizations to construct'.

Note: "The ancient civilizations" refers to a specific set of civilizations already known to the reader. In the original sentence, we are talking about ancient civilizations in general, so no article ("the") is preferred.

7.Ans: (B)

Explanation: The relative clause "which cannot replicate" is awkward and incorrectly refers to methods as the recipient of the features, which is illogical.

The correct structure is: "offering features that traditional methods cannot replicate"

"That" is appropriate for essential relative clauses involving things (like "methods").

"Cannot replicating" is grammatically incorrect, and "who" is used for people, not for methods.

The preposition "to" is also wrong, as the features are not being offered to methods.

8.Ans: (D)

Explanation: "Seamless" is an adjective, but in this sentence we need an adverb to modify the verb "blend", so the correct form is "seamlessly".

Also, "innovation and experience" is a compound plural subject, so the verb "blend" (not "is blend" or "are blended") is appropriate.

The correct phrase is: "where innovation and experience seamlessly blend."

Note: The original sentence (and the meaning intended) describes innovation and experience as actively combining, not being blended by someone else. So active voice ("blend") fits better than passive voice ("are blended").

9.Ans: (B)

Explanation: The sentence lists three parallel activities as key components of a healthy lifestyle: exercising regularly, getting enough sleep, drink plenty of water (this part is incorrect)

In a list, we must maintain the same grammatical form. The first two items (exercising and getting) are in -ing form (gerunds), so the third should also be in the gerund form: “drinking”.

10.Ans: (A)

Explanation: The correct pronoun is ‘whom’, as it is the object of the preposition ‘of’.

‘Most’ refers to people (athletes), so ‘which’ is incorrect.

Since ‘most’ implies a plural subject, we need ‘had represented’, not ‘has represented’.

Correct phrase: ‘most of whom had represented’.
